Order Denying Plaintiffs' Joint Motion for Default Judgment Against Paul Strickland, Jr. and Closing Case

[ECF No. 62]

10 The Leo Winer Trust and Michael Pepitone Trust sue brothers Steve and Paul Strickland 11 and other parties for their alleged mistreatment of plaintiffs' investments. Paul Strickland is the 12 sole remaining defendant, and plaintiffs move for default judgment against him for a second 13 time.<sup>1</sup> Although Winer and Pepitone allege 15 claims against Paul, I find that none of them is 14 properly supported by facts sufficient for me to enter default judgment against him. I therefore 15 deny their motion for default judgment against Paul and dismiss this case.

16 Background

17 A. Factual history of this case

18 Plaintiffs allege that they first came into contact with Steve Strickland when they invested 19 in the commodities of physical silver and gold bullion through Advantage Metals, LLC, a 20 company that was managed by Steve and another person who is not a party to this case.<sup>2</sup> In April 21 2011, Steve told plaintiffs that the co-manager of Advantage Metals had stolen "hundreds of 22 thousands of dollars" from them.<sup>3</sup> Advantage Metals was sued by other investors, and a receiver

1 was appointed two months later to wind up the company's affairs.<sup>4</sup> Shortly before this happened, 2 Steve formed the company Advantage Trading Group in Wyoming,<sup>5</sup> and around this time, Steve 3 flew his brother Paul out to meet Winer and Pepitone.<sup>6</sup>

4 Later that year, Steve visited Winer and Pepitone and persuaded them to sign a document
5 authorizing Steve to transfer their silver interests to Steve personally and deposit those interests 6 into separate accounts in Brink's depository in New York for future investment.<sup>7</sup> Under the 7 agreement, Winer and Pepitone authorized Steve to serve as their "agent and attorney-in-fact 8 relating to" their "holdings in Silver bars and/or bullion at Brinks, Incorporated" and to "contract 9 for the sale" of those interests "through an authorized precious metals dealer . . . ."<sup>8</sup> They further 10 authorized Steve to deliver the proceeds of any sale "in favor of investments in managed 11 investment productions . . . in one or more accounts . . . opened and maintained by Steve . . . as 12 the Account's Manager" or his "designee, including Advantage Trading Group" or in a similar 13 "investment management vehicle" in plaintiffs' names.<sup>9</sup>

14 Steve then caused plaintiffs' silver interests to be sold in October 2011,<sup>10</sup> and he 15 presented them with an "Offering and Disclosure Memorandum" for Advantage Trading, which 16 purported to be an offer to sell plaintiffs "Equity Interest Units" in Advantage Trading.<sup>11</sup> The

1 document states that Advantage Trading is a commodities pool<sup>12</sup> that is exempt from registration 2 under the Securities Act of 1933 and the Commodities Exchange Act.<sup>13</sup> Attached as addenda to 3 the offering and disclosure memorandum were: (1) Advantage Trading’s operating agreement; 4 (2) an agreement to be signed by members of Advantage Trading acknowledging receipt and 5 accepting the terms of the operating agreement; (3) an advisory agreement wherein Advantage 6 Trading retains Paul as its commodity-trading advisor; (4) instructions for purchasing a 7 subscription in the Advantage Trading pool; and (5) an agreement to purchase a subscription in 8 Advantage Trading.<sup>14</sup>

9 Plaintiffs acknowledge that they did not execute the subscription agreement.<sup>15</sup> Instead 10 they allege that an oral agreement to do so can be “cobbled together” from the “oral and written 11 documents . . . .”<sup>16</sup> However, they later “deny that a contract exists, because there was not a 12 meeting of the minds,”<sup>17</sup> and they allege that the agreement is unenforceable because it is an 13 adhesion contract and unconscionable.<sup>18</sup>

14 Plaintiffs allege that, two months after Steve provided them with the offering and 15 confidential disclosure memorandum, they “received a document from Paul” stating that each 16 plaintiff “had invested $100,000.”<sup>19</sup> Plaintiffs were confused and alarmed because they knew

5 Steve next flew to Las Vegas in March 2012 to celebrate Pepitone’s birthday.<sup>24</sup> Pepitone 6 died shortly after Steve’s visit, and Steve returned to Las Vegas to care for Winer.<sup>25</sup> Two of 7 Winer’s nephews arrived two days later and pushed Steve to put in writing Steve’s allegations 8 that it was his former co-manager of Advantage Metals that “screwed” Winer and Pepitone out of 9 hundreds of thousands of dollars.<sup>26</sup> Steve refused, claiming advice of counsel, and blamed
10 management of the company on his brother Paul.<sup>27</sup> Winer informed Steve that one of Winer’s 11 nephews was to become his caretaker; Steve then returned to Florida.<sup>28</sup>

12 Winer next tried to contact Steve, but his efforts were ignored until Steve finally 13 answered in April 2012 claiming that his phone was broken.<sup>29</sup> Before that, Paul emailed Winer

5 “Weekly Account Report” from Paul, similar to the documents that Winer and Pepitone had 6 previously received.<sup>32</sup>

7 Based on Paul’s report dated April 20, 2012, Winer wrote Paul and Steve four days later, 8 demanding that they confirm in writing and with copies of receipts that 6555.86 ounces of silver 9 bullion<sup>33</sup> had been placed in deposit under the names of Winer’s and Pepitone’s respective

1 against Steve and Advantage Trading were dismissed without prejudice due to lack of service;<sup>39</sup>
2 and the Clerk of the Court entered default against Paul.<sup>40</sup> Plaintiffs previously moved for default 3 judgment against Paul, but I denied that motion without prejudice, identified the deficiencies in 4 their submission, and gave them another chance to cure those deficiencies.<sup>41</sup>

5 Plaintiffs now reurge their motion for default judgment against Paul.<sup>42</sup> Though they offer 6 more than last time—supplementing with an affidavit and more than 50 pages of exhibits—their 7 proffer is still not sufficient to state a single claim against Paul. I therefore deny plaintiffs’ 8 motion for default judgment against Paul, dismiss the claims against him because my inability to 9 find a single claim means that plaintiffs have not pled a viable claim against him, and close this 10 case.

11 Discussion

12 A. Legal standard

13 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 55(b)(2) permits a plaintiff to obtain a default judgment 14 if the clerk previously entered default based on a defendant’s failure to defend. After entry of 15 default, the complaint’s factual allegations are taken as true, except those relating to damages.<sup>43</sup> 16 “[N]ecessary facts not contained in the pleadings, and claims [that] are legally insufficient, are 17 not established by default.”<sup>44</sup> The court has the power to require a plaintiff to provide additional 18 proof of facts or damages to ensure that the requested relief is appropriate.<sup>45</sup> Whether to grant a 26 if a responsive pleading is required and the allegation is not denied.”).

1 motion for default judgment lies within the district court’s discretion,<sup>46</sup> which is guided by the 2 seven factors outlined by the Ninth Circuit in Eitel v. McCool:

3 (1) the possibility of prejudice to the plaintiff; (2) the merits of 4 plaintiff’s substantive claim; (3) sufficiency of the complaint; (4) 5 the sum of money at stake in the action; (5) the possibility of a 6 dispute concerning material facts; (6) whether the default was due to excusable neglect; and (7) the strong policy underlying the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure favoring decisions on the merits.<sup>47</sup>

7 A default judgment is generally disfavored because “[c]ases should be decided upon their merits 8 whenever reasonably possible.”<sup>48</sup>

9 B. None of plaintiffs’ claims against Paul are sufficiently supported by facts.

10 The second and third Eitel factors require plaintiffs to demonstrate that they have stated a 11 claim on which they may recover.<sup>49</sup> I denied Winer and Pepitone’s first motion for default 12 judgment against Paul without prejudice because they failed to say why their claims against Paul 13 were sufficiently pleaded and how those claims entitled them to relief. Unfortunately, their 14 second motion for default judgment suffers from these same deficiencies. Winer and Pepitone 15 allege claims against Paul for intentional misrepresentation, fraud in the inducement, 16 constructive fraud, negligent misrepresentation, fraud and misrepresentations by commodities 17 trader advisor, breach of contract and the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, unjust 18 enrichment, civil conspiracy, aiding and abetting a fiduciary breach, and violations of the 19 Commodities Exchange Act, and they move for default on all of them.<sup>50</sup> But the facts they’ve 24 <sup>49</sup> See Danning v. Lavine, 572 F.2d 1386, 1388 (9th Cir. 1978).

25 <sup>50</sup> Plaintiffs also move for a default judgment against Paul based on a number of additional 26 “counts” that are not independent claims for relief or have no merit in this context, so I do not 27 evaluate them separately. Unconscionable contract (Count 8) and adhesion contract (Count 10) 28 are not claims for relief, they are defenses to the enforcement of a contract. Nagrampa v.
MailCoups, Inc., 469 F.3d 1257, 1280 (9th Cir. 2006) (“It is well-established that

1 alleged do not support relief on any claim.

2 1. Intentional misrepresentation and fraud in the inducement

3 Plaintiffs' first and second claims for relief are for intentional misrepresentation and fraud
4 in the inducement.<sup>51</sup> Intentional misrepresentation and fraud in the inducement require the same
5 elements of proof. Rule 9(b) of the Federal Rules of Evidence states that any allegation of fraud 6 must be plead with particularity. Winer and Pepitone must prove five elements by clear and 7 convincing evidence: (1) the defendant made a false representation, (2) the defendant knew or 8 believed that statement was false or had no basis for the statement's truth, (3) the defendant 9 intended to induce the plaintiffs to act, (4) the plaintiffs relied on the false statement, and (5) the 10 plaintiffs suffered damages.<sup>52</sup> Winer and Pepitone do not provide any facts to show that Paul 11 knew or believed his accountings were false or that his statement about their physical silver in 12 deposit was false. Nor do they provide any facts to show that Paul had an insufficient basis for 13 making these statements.

14 Also lacking are any facts to show that Paul induced Winer and Pepitone into a contract.
15 They show instead that Steve presented them with all of the written contracts. Plaintiffs allege

17 unconscionability is a generally applicable contract defense . . ."). It appears that Nevada 18 recognizes a claim for undue influence (Count 9) only in the context of a will contest, which is 19 not the situation we have in this case. See In re Estate of Bethurem, 313 P.3d 237, 241 (Nev.
20 2013). Piercing the corporate veil (Count 16) is an alternative theory for liability to attach, not an 21 independent cause of action. See, e.g., Int'l Fin. Servs. Corp. v. Chromas Techs. Canada, Inc., 22 356 F.3d 731, 736 (7th Cir. 2004) ("Piercing the corporate veil, after all, is not itself an action; it 23 is merely a procedural means of allowing liability on a substantive claim, here breach of 24 contract."); George v. Morton, No. 2:06-cv-1112 PMP-GEF, 2007 WL 680788, at *14 (D. Nev.
25 Mar. 1, 2007) (request to pierce the corporate veil is a remedy, not a cause of action). Winding up and dissolution of a company (Count 17) is similarly a remedy, not a claim. And although 26 plaintiffs pled a claim against Paul entitled "Equitable Estoppel," (see Count 15), they 27 acknowledge that this "claim involves exclusively the amount of damages," so they do not argue 28 for default based on the doctrine of equitable estoppel. See ECF No. 62 at 19.

26 <sup>51</sup> ECF No. 25 at 13–14.

27 <sup>52</sup> J.A. Jones Constr. Co. v. Lehrer McGovern Bovis, Inc., 89 P.3d 1009, 1018 (Nev. 2004); 28 Nelson v. Heer, 163 P.3d 420, 426 (Nev. 2007).

1 that Paul had many conversations on the phone with them, but they never explain what those 2 conversations had to do with an oral agreement. Because the plaintiffs have not alleged any 3 particular facts to support the first three elements of intentional misrepresentation and fraud in 4 the inducement, I deny default judgment on these claims and dismiss them for failure to state a 5 claim for relief.

6 2. Constructive fraud

7 Plaintiffs' third claim is for constructive fraud.<sup>53</sup> To prove constructive fraud, a plaintiff 8 must show that the defendant breached some legal or equitable duty that is owed to the plaintiff.<sup>54</sup>
9 This duty arises out of a fiduciary or confidential relationship.<sup>55</sup> The breach is considered 10 fraudulent because it deceives or breaks the confidence between the parties.<sup>56</sup>

11 Winer and Pepitone have not shown that they had a fiduciary or confidential relationship 12 with Paul. The evidence shows that Paul is an advisor only to Advantage Trading. While the 13 plaintiffs have alleged that they trusted Steve like a brother, they have not provided facts to show 14 that trust extended to Steve's brother Paul. While they state that they had many phone calls with 15 Paul, they do not explain what these phone calls were about. They also state that they believed 16 Paul's first account statement was wrong, suggesting they did not trust him early on. Winer and 17 Pepitone thus have not established that they had a fiduciary or confidential relationship with 18 Paul, so I deny default judgment on this claim and dismiss it.

19 3. Negligent misrepresentation

20 Plaintiffs' fourth cause of action is for negligent misrepresentation.<sup>57</sup> Negligent 21 misrepresentation requires that a defendant, in the course of his business, (1) provides false

1 information in guiding plaintiffs in business transactions and (2) fails to exercise reasonable care
2 or competence with providing that information.<sup>58</sup> The defendant will be liable for the plaintiffs'
3 losses if they justifiably relied on the defendant's false statements.<sup>59</sup>

4 Winer and Pepitone argue that Paul gave false information when he sent an account 5 statement claiming their physical silver was held in depository receipt, but they provide no 6 evidence to show why this statement is false. They do explain why Steve's statements are false, 7 but, they only conclude that Paul misrepresented the "facts and operation of the investments."
8 Plaintiffs also do not provide facts to show how Paul was guiding them in any business 9 transaction. Their evidence merely shows that he provided the weekly or monthly accounting 10 reports. Thus, I deny default judgment on this claim and dismiss it.

11 4. Fraud and misrepresentation by a commodities advisor

12 In count five, the plaintiffs allege a claim for fraud and misrepresentations by a 13 commodities trading advisor.<sup>60</sup> Title 7 U.S.C. § 6o prohibits a commodities advisor from 14 employing any scheme or engaging in any practice that would defraud a participant.<sup>61</sup> Winer and 15 Pepitone have not provided any facts to show that Paul defrauded them of their silver or money.
16 Their conclusory statement that he engaged in practices to defraud them is still not enough. I 17 therefore deny default judgment on this claim and dismiss it for failure to state a claim.

18 5. Contract-based claims

19 Winer and Pepitone also move for default judgment against Paul on their claims for 20 breach of contract and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in counts six

1 and seven.<sup>62</sup> These claims require plaintiffs to show that they had a valid contract with Paul.<sup>63</sup> 2 Plaintiffs invite me to “cobble[] together” an oral agreement between them and Paul from 3 Advanced Trading’s offering memorandum documents and their oral communications with 4 Paul.<sup>64</sup> The offering memorandum and accompanying subscription agreement is basically an 5 agreement for plaintiffs to become members of the Advantage Trading company. The offering 6 memorandum documents show that Advantage Trading retained Paul as a commodity-trading 7 advisor.<sup>65</sup>

8 But plaintiffs do not provide details of any conversation that they had with Paul about 9 them (1) becoming members of Advantage Trading, (2) being treated like they were members of 10 that company, or (3) being led to believe that Paul would otherwise act as their commodity-11 trading advisor. Plaintiffs allege that Paul “responded to most of the Plaintiffs’ emails by 12 referring to himself and holding himself out as a ‘manager [of Advantage Trading]’ as well” as 13 Steve.<sup>66</sup> So, they argue, Paul was obligated to perform managerial duties just like Steve. But it is 14 unclear from the emails that Paul was claiming to be a manager of Advantage Trading: his 15 signature block states “Managing Director” but does not identify of what, and his emails are sent 16 from an algoadvisors@gmail.com account.<sup>67</sup> Plaintiffs’ evidence does show that Paul sent them

1 “Monthly Commodity Statement[s]” from “Advantage Trading Group LLC,”<sup>68</sup> yet this is not 2 sufficient to show that they had a meeting of the minds with Paul. Plaintiffs have not shown that 3 a valid oral agreement exists between themselves and Paul, so I deny default judgment on their 4 claims for breach of contract and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing 5 and I dismiss these claims.

6 6. Unjust enrichment

7 Plaintiffs’ eleventh claim for relief is for unjust enrichment.<sup>69</sup> Unjust enrichment has 8 three elements: (1) the plaintiff gave a benefit to the defendant, (2) that defendant enjoyed the 9 benefit, and (3) the defendant’s acceptance and retention of the benefit is inequitable under the 10 circumstances.<sup>70</sup> Winer and Pepitone provide only conclusory statements to support this claim.
11 It is unclear what benefit or money Paul got from them. Plaintiffs allege that it is inequitable for 12 all of the defendants to keep the benefit because they fraudulently induced the plaintiffs into 13 signing documents and used their assets for their own benefit, but Winer and Pepitone do not 14 adequately show that Paul induced them into signing any contract or what benefit Paul received 15 as a result. Thus, I deny default judgment on the unjust enrichment claim and dismiss it.

16 7. Civil conspiracy

17 In their twelfth cause of action, plaintiffs allege a civil fraud conspiracy.<sup>71</sup> Rule 9(b) of 18 the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure requires plaintiffs to allege fraud with particularity and, in 19 instances of multiple defendants, plaintiffs must allege each of the individuals’ roles within the 20 scheme.<sup>72</sup> Winer and Pepitone do not detail what Paul’s specific role was in the alleged scheme.

1 They merely refer to defendants' actions in general, without stating how Paul participated in 2 contrast to Steve. Plaintiffs' bare allegations would not inform Paul—and does not inform 3 me—of his individual role in the alleged fraud. I therefore deny default judgment on the 4 plaintiffs' civil conspiracy claim and dismiss it.

5 8. Aiding and abetting

6 Plaintiffs' fourteenth claim for relief is entitled "aiding and abetting."<sup>73</sup> To show that a 7 defendant is liable for civil aiding and abetting, the plaintiffs must establish that: (1) a defendant 8 had a fiduciary relationship with the plaintiffs, (2) defendant committed a wrongful act that 9 breached that duty, (3) another defendant knowingly and substantially helped in this breach, and 10 (4) the plaintiffs suffered damages.<sup>74</sup> Winer and Pepitone provide no evidence or well-pled facts 11 to show that Paul knew of the allegedly fraudulent scheme. Their conclusory statements that 12 Paul aided and abetted in Steve's breach of his duty to them is not particular enough to satisfy 13 Rule 9(b). I therefore deny default judgment on this claim and dismiss it.

14 9. Violations of securities laws

15 Winer and Pepitone do not state in their eighteenth cause of action what securities laws 16 Paul has allegedly violated, and their conclusory statement that he violated these laws is not 17 enough.<sup>75</sup> Plaintiffs state that he violated securities laws in general by referencing sections from 18 the offering memorandum. But this does not inform me what the allegations against Paul are, 19 and I find that plaintiffs have not shown that a valid agreement exists between them and Paul.
20 Thus, I deny default judgment on this claim and dismiss it.

27 <sup>75</sup> ECF No. 25 at 27–28.

Plaintiffs’ nineteenth and final claim is entitled “violation of the Commodities Exchange Act.”<sup>76</sup> Under 7 U.S.C. § 60, a commodity trading advisor should not employ a scheme or engage in any practice that will defraud a participant.<sup>77</sup> A private right of action under the Commodities Exchange Act also exists under section twenty-five.<sup>78</sup> Plaintiffs base their claim on a private right of action arising out of a contract.<sup>79</sup> They allege that Steve and Paul did not file notices, keep books, or comply with the limits for a commodity pool operator’s registration requirements under the Commodity Futures Trading Commission’s rules.<sup>80</sup> But plaintiffs have not shown that there is a binding contract between themselves and Paul. I therefore deny default judgment on this claim and dismiss it.

Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that plaintiffs' motion for default judgment against Paul Strickland, Jr. [ECF No. 62] is DENIED, and all of plaintiffs' claims against this defendant are dismissed. And because the dismissal of all claims against Paul Strickland, Jr. leaves no claims remaining in this case, the Clerk of the Court is directed to CLOSE this case.
